For labs 2 and lab 3 you implemented a method for finding word similarities from their embeddings using search trees to enable efficient search. For this lab, your task is to implement the same methods you used in lab 3 but now use a hash table to (hopefully) obtain even better performance.

Compare the running times of your program to those obtained using binary search trees and B-Trees. As usual, write a report describing your work.